*Formal Report on Carriage Test of CAMUSO II on 13 September 1951.

1. Object of Test: Assessment.

2. Procedure: Standard, with interpreter.

3. Estimated Reliability of the Test Results: There are indications that the subject may be mentally unstable and perhaps emotionally defective, so that the reliability of the results as far as specific questions are concerned, should be "unreliable" in the scale of "reliable", "fairly reliable", and "unreliable".

4. Summary of the Test Results: Subject appears to be the person he claims to be and does not apparently consider himself to be either a Communist agent or a Criminal. Subject appears to be hiding something he considers important about his life history and is very disturbed by questions concerning his intentions or motives.

5. Carriage Officer's Appraisal of Subject: Subject appears in many ways to be a psychopathic personality or possibly in the early stage of some psychosis: his responses are inconsistent and his emotions appear dulled and unbalanced. He has some degree of what is known as the "paranoid stare", and is very hard-eyed. Subject appears to be rational at the present time.

6. Remarks & Recommendations: This person may be quite dangerous and capable of violence on small provocation. If he has to be used, a most exhaustive investigation of his background through independent agencies would be advisable.

*Detailed Report handed to Case Officer on 15 September 1951.

RNPILLON states that on the basis of his inquiries before subject was contacted and his personal observation during last year, subject is extremely cheerful and mild even under disagreeable conditions and, contrary to having dulled emotions, has a ready wit which is often displayed in the form of cartoons, at which subject is adept. Subject is also musically inclined, plays the violin, and is presently studying accordion. CAMUSO I and RNPILLON say he is not at all easily provoked. He will, however, be closely watched during use for such tendencies as CARRIAGE has indicated.
